

You can notice that when you take the picture when you are close to the object, more of the background shows. zooming in or out alters the focal length, that helps with the size of the other objects. This exercise helps you to get objects to appear larger/smaller than they actually are.