

aperture was the first thing I ever learned that is related to photography. It was super interesting for me the first time I used a dslr camera because it was doing something the phones could not do. The lower you see the f, the more blur the background. But when you want a bigger Depth of field, You set the f to a higher number.